IDLE MONEY

Banking bids to the extent of $5,000,000,000 in response to the Federal Treasury's offer of $650,000,000 in notes bearing 3½ and 2½ per cent interest are convincing evidence that the country is financially sound, that credit resources are ample, and that as a nation we are ready to go ahead with business once confidence is re-established.

Money is cheap and plentiful where the lender has confidence in the borrower's ability to pay, on short notice. If the bankers could recover their confidence in business there would be more than ample credit for business, which is stagnant now largely because of inadequate working capital.

Business may have to draw capital from private sources and prove its ability to meet new obligations before the banks reopen their vaults and close their minds to such ugly eventualities as bank runs and panics. Pioneers are seldom found in banks, and for very good reason.

There will come a time when a successful business man can again go to his bank and borrow on reasonable security for expansion purposes, and that time may not be as far off as most people fear.

LAMONT'S NEW JOB

Secretary Robert P. Lamont quit the Department of Commerce to go home to the steel industry, for as the active head of the American Iron and Steel Institute he is restored to the industry which fathered him as President of the American Steel Foundries for many years prior to his entrance into public life.

For having been in public life he will be more useful to the institute and industry. Of particular value at this time is an understanding within big business of the attitude of the government and public toward big business, and that understanding he must have acquired through his association with Federal Government in its inner circle.

The iron and steel industry did not establish its institute for the purpose of evading the Sherman anti-trust law. The institute has proved itself useful to both producer and consumer of iron and steel products without resort to price-fixing or other unfair practices. And with the industry operating at less than 15 per cent of capacity at present there is a large field for its activities in the direction of stabilization and as the recognized leader of American industry.

Former Secretary Lamont can perform as genuinely public service as head of the institute as he was rendering as secretary of commerce, just as other men, snatched from public life by big business, have continued serving the nation.

Rudy Vallee decided to enter the law after the lady juror became a fact.

We believe the news that Chicago police are on the scent of a truck of stolen cheese.

If the public is reading more scientific news, it may be because it likes riddles.

Now that everybody has one the Democratic party starts worrying about its eternal deficit.

Square Meal Called Lawn's Best Defense

Feeding lawns and perennials a square meal in the fall to protect them against winter killing is now the practice of better home gardeners. This is particularly advisable when your lawn has gone through a hot, dry summer and is naturally in a weakened condition.

Most people think it is the freezing of the plants above the surface of the soil that does the damage to lawns and plants during winter, but this is not the case. It is the alternate freezing and thawing of the soil itself, which causes an expansion and contraction of the soil and breaks the roots of the plants, especially those with small, weak root systems. This movement of the soil by freezing and thawing is commonly called "heaving."

As a protection against these winter hardships, experienced gardeners are recommending feeding your lawn and plants a square meal of a balanced plant food. The application of it on established and new lawns in the late summer and early fall develops strong, vigorous root systems that will help prevent winter killing.

Take the proper steps now to protect your lawn and garden before winter weather sets in.

OLD CAR STANDS UP

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(INS)—Using a 1908 model motor car, Jay Wright, of Tulare, Cal., and his wife have completed an automobile trip from California to Kansas City. Despite the age of the car, and its record of 200,000 miles, the Wrights were in trouble only once during their long trip.

FIND NEW LANGUAGE

SIMLA, India—(INS)—Casting doubt on the usual theory that Brahmi is derived from Phoenician, the language of the world's first great sailors, a rock inscription that may date from 2,000 B. C. has been found in a forest near Sambalpur. The inscription is in some strange tongue neither Brahmi nor Pali.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COWLEY-FRIEDLE INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Lola Carewe, "The Night Club Lady", and her guest, Christine Quires, are mysteriously murdered in the former's apartment. Scorpions were the instruments of death. The police suspect Guy Everett, the last person to see Christine alive. Lola had blackmailed Everett. He, however, claims that Christine discovered a plot to kill Lola and feared for her own life because of her knowledge. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt learns that a young Paris bank clerk, named Basil Boucher, loved Lola. After robbing a bank to buy her a ruby, Basil disappeared. His parents sold medical laboratory specimens. Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, became hysterical at the mention of Basil, calling her daughter a beast and saying Lola never loved him. Edgar Quires, Christine's brother, left his Rochester home for New York following the receipt of a telegram the day of the murders. Christine was to have inherited wealth shortly. Suspicion also points to Dr. Hugh Baldwin when it is disclosed that he purchased scorpions. He had stated heart failure caused the deaths. Colt, calling to question Baldwin, finds him dead—from a scorpion bite! Mrs. Baldwin reveals that she knew her husband was involved with Lola. In Baldwin's desk the Commissioner finds a statement in which the doctor explains he accidentally poisoned Gaylord Gifford, Lola's husband. Lola's knowledge of this placed Baldwin in her power. She forced him to supply narcotics which she used to victimize her friends and later blackmailed them. Then she ordered him to obtain a scorpion to commit a murder. Baldwin learned that Vincent Rowland, the lawyer, was behind Lola's blackmailing and realized his knowledge of their activities marked the doctor for death.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

"I TOLD Lola that I wanted to see her alone. She consented and took me into the boudoir. I told her that I had the scorpions in two boxes in my overcoat, which I had thrown over my arm as I entered her bedroom. She became very eager and entreated me to let her see them. But I hesitated. I explained to her how dangerous they were. I told her that she ought not to take risks—of any kind. Then I looked her squarely in the eyes and told her that murder was a game that was always caught."

"She looked me in the eye quite as frankly and laughed. She demanded the scorpions and full instructions as to how to manage them. I gave her the boxes with strict instructions and then I started for the door. Just as my hand was on the knob, she called to me."

"I remember her words with the most detestable distinctness."

"Look here, Baldwin," she said in her soft and always lovely voice. "One of these days I may be sending for you on a hurried matter. I mean, somebody may be sick—taken sick all of a sudden. Understand?"

"I nodded. I felt I understood all too well. But I had no idea of the devilish reach of that woman's imagination."

"Well," she drawled, "if that ever happens, I can tell you right now what is expected of you. When you get here, you'll find somebody that's sick. When you do, look on their arm for a bite. On the arm, remember. Then stick your hypo needle right in the bite. Do you understand?"

"I do not know to this day how I stood there without crying out against such a fiendish, damnable scheme. Yet she was looking at me, smiling, serene, beautiful. Yes, I thought, the devil is a woman and the woman is Lola Carewe."

"Vincent Rowland did not answer when I bade him good-night. I went home in the depths of despair. I tried to forget about it. I planned a trip out of town. I would not be there when I was sent for. But I was a coward—the worst coward in history. I was in too deep. I had done criminal things too long. There was no moral strength left for me to draw upon."

"I told her that I had the scorpions in two boxes in my overcoat," Baldwin's letter read.

Here there was an interruption in this extraordinary manuscript. A smaller sheet of paper was laid between the leaves. On the top, I read:

"I have just been called to Lola's apartment—this New Year's Eve—while I was writing this."

And at the bottom of the page I read: "Everything has happened—now I am back here—there can be only one end—"

Then the regular pages flowed on in the strong black script:

"Whom did she mean to kill besides myself? Often I debated that question. But she had so many irons in the fire, it might easily be someone I did not even know. I felt comforted by this reflection. But I was like a man walking in a nightmare. Then, only a day or so before New Year's, Lola telephoned me in a rage. Someone had stolen the boxes I had given her."

"The scorpions were gone!"

"She blamed me. She accused me of having stolen them back. I had a key to the apartment which she had given me, for often she wanted me to come in and see her without ringing the bell and thus calling attention to my call. She thought I was weakening. She made me promise to get her more scorpions."

"To calm her, I promised that I would obtain two more scorpions. But I explained that it would again take weeks. The specimens had to be sent for. I would have to see my supply man, Ricardo Villafranca."

"However, I kept delaying, but finally did it. Imagine my surprise—my terror—when I received a call to come to Lola's apartment just a few hours ago. But my consternation was increased tenfold when I entered the room and saw the victim was Lola Carewe herself."

"I was in a panic. There she lay. I looked at her arms. She herself had been bitten by the scorpion."

The mark was plainly there. In self-defense I said she had had heart trouble and then in self-defense I performed the trick which she had taught me. I put the needle into the bite, and thus obliterated all trace."

"But who killed her? Who killed Christine Quires—by the same deadly scorpion bite? I do not know more. But I am going to get one more scorpion. After what I have done tonight—and the knowledge that Lola's papers will surely expose me—I do not care to live. Disregard all I said at the beginning of this letter—I truly die by my own hand."

Here, abruptly, the writing ended. There was no signature. Doctor Hugh Baldwin lay dead at our feet. Had he actually taken his own life, in horror and remorse? There seemed little doubt of that. But the accusations—veiled and specific which he had left behind—what of them?

The letter was not the end of the mystery. It was the beginning of a larger and more baffling problem.

Thoughtfully and deliberately, Thatcher Colt filled his pipe and lighted it.

"It is a melancholy probability, Tony," he began, "that Doctor Baldwin could have saved three lives, his own included, had he had the manhood to come down to Center Street and tell me the facts. I could have protected that man from everything, disgrace in his own profession included."

"Looks like this blows up Dougherty's jewel-ring idea," I remarked. Colt nodded.

"But Dougherty was on the trail of something real—something important," Colt replied. "It happened to be blackmail, instead of jewel thieves—but Dougherty was getting somewhere. More power to him, say I. I have had the Rock-Ribbed Securities Corporation looked up this morning. It was a bucket-shop affair, and the officers have all shipped to South America."

Here the Commissioner paused to relight his pipe.

"That letter of Baldwin's is really very upsetting, about Rowland," he resumed, as he sauntered across the floor. "It reveals the interesting suspicion—for Baldwin seems to have no real proof as yet—that Vincent Rowland is a rogue. Suppose he is? Is he a murderer?"

"If he were the one he had every cause to be the other," I argued.

"And some semblance of opportunity—that is to say, he was on the premises last night. Right! If Rowland were frightened, he might be the man to take bold, decisive action. That has always been his method in his court-room battles, spectacular affairs, always. Moreover, he might figure that these very three people stood in his way. And yet—"

He stopped short, leaving the sentence uncompleted, while he knelt by the body and stared at it moodily.

CROYDON ENDS WINNING STREAK OF THIRD WARD

The Third Ward All Stars who had run up a winning streak of 12 straight games went to Croydon yesterday afternoon seeking their thirteenth consecutive victory but due to two costly miscues by Pete Court and Joe Flatch who had both dropped fly balls which should have been caught with ease, they lost.

"Nev" McGinley who had recently won seven straight games for the local lads, tasted defeat for the first time this season when he was mastered by Len Goldner in a brilliant pitchers' duel which ended 3-2 in favor of the Croydonites.

Jim Massilla and Ray Purcell led the hitters with two hits each. Mike Riola starred in the field for the Warders, while Jimmie Jackson featured in the field for the Croydonites.

Tonight the All Stars will meet the Depression IX, of Bristol which consists of several players of the Bristol Twilight League, the probable batteries being Smith and Sid Purcell for the Depressions while "Nev" McGinley and Ed Dugan will work for the Warders. Game starts 6.30.

A. C. OF CROYDON SPLITS WEEK-END DOUBLE BILL

Croydon A. C. split a double bill with the Monarch A. C. over the week-end, winning Saturday's fray 6-5 when Baker hit a home-run with one on base in the ninth inning, and losing yesterday's fray 4-0 when Chester allowed three hits in blanking the home club.

Croydon filled the bases in the fourth with no one out, but failed to score. Only thirty batters faced the visiting hurler.

NEWS BRIEFS

AUTO DEATHS IN STATE

Automobile crashes brought the death list to 12 and injuries to more than a score over the week, a statewide check-up by I. N. S. revealed today. As in recent holiday periods Western Pennsylvania again reported more fatal traffic crashes than the rest of the state combined. Eight persons were killed and a like number injured in the western region. Central Pennsylvania reported three fatalities and eastern Pennsylvania reported one. Eastern Pennsylvania however reported 13 injured as against one in the central region.

SHIP MYSTERY

Kehl, Germany, Aug. 22.—Mystery
today surrounded the fate of 35 of the 69 naval cadets lost in the sinking of the German training ship "Nobe" near here. The bulk which had been towed into the harbor was searched completely and only 34 of the missing cadets were recovered. Since no bodies have been found afloat or washed ashore authorities are unable to explain their disappearance. Nearly all the bodies found were piled in the laboratory in a manner indicating a great struggle was staged during the brief three minutes in which the craft went down in a squall.

STATE NEWS

CHARLEROI.—That completion of the government's $1,500,000 dam at Lock No. 4 on the Monongahela River
may cost the Borough of North Charleroi one of its three names is the fear of Dr. Albert S. Sickman, physician and burgoon of that municipality.
Dr. Sickman is wondering whether the borough's post office address,
"Lock No. 4," will move upstream into the Borough of Charleroi with the transfer of activities from the old to the new dam and lock.

In addition to the name derived from the government dam, North Charleroi's
railroad station is known as West Monessen. A little confusing to outsiders, but it's still North Charleroi
to the doctor and his residents.

The enormous expenditure on the new project includes the new dam, lock and powerhouse. Power house machinery, a considerable addition, is not included in that figure. The new dam is 550 feet long, 21 feet high, and 60 feet wide. The lock boasts two chambers, both 56 feet wide. The land chamber stretches for 720 feet,
and the river chamber has a length of 360 feet. To top it off, more than 92-013 cubic yards of concrete went into its construction.

Three water turbines and a steam plant comprise the power equipment of the new structure, the fourth to serve here since construction of the first crude locks and dam in 1844.

Anderson A. Casebeer, 55, old steamboating man and lockmaster of "Old
No. 4," after 28 years of lock tending, will move with his crew to care for Uncle Sam's newest river property.

Local Net Stars Show Up Well, Trenton Tilts

entirely to lack of poise and steady-ness, which are acquired only by experience in such contests, that resulted in the defeat of the local stars.

The splendid showing made by Lawrence and Green in both the singles and doubles matches, is a matter of satisfaction to their many Bristol friends. The boys have been getting experience in these Trenton tournaments, which will be of value to them in the future, and this encourages the hope that next year they may bring the championship to Bristol.

Yesterday Kuser and Craig regained
the throne they abdicated a year ago
through Kuser's illness, by administering a three-to-one defeat to last season's incumbents, Bob Boyd and Leon Levy, in the final match of the Trenton senior doubles championships.

One of the largest galleries of the season surrounded the now-famous "centre-court" at Cadwallader Park to see the perfect teamwork and experience of the Kuser-Craig combination prevail over the defending titlehold-ers in a reasonably hard-fought match.

The scores were 8-6, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2.
The title was the eighth municipal doubles award that has been carried by Kuser, recent winner of the singles competition, and Craig, his husky partner, through a decade or more of competitive match play.

Following the match Umpire Edward L. Waldron, who is also director of tournaments, presented the winning team with silver cups and the losers with gold medals. Boyd and Levy received runner-up medals. Kuser and Boyd were also given a cup and medal, respectively, as victor and defeated finalists in the singles play. Other finalists honored were: Joe Waldron and Jerry Levy, junior singles, and Edgar Levy and Tom Douress, midget singles.

As Mollison Completed Transatlantic Solo

Here is Captain James A. Mollison, intrepid British flyer, shown beside his tiny Puss Moth plane just after he had landed at Pennfield Ridge, New Brunswick, to complete the first westward solo flight across the North Atlantic. A terrific battle against fog and headwinds forced the gallant flyer to abandon his projected non-stop flight to New York. Inset Mollison is shown with Health Commissioner H. I. Taylor of New Brunswick who was the first Canadian official to congratulate and welcome him.
